Rivalry and progress in Outer Mongolia

TETHE Communist Party Con 上 gress in Outer Mongolia has attracted international attention because it happens to be the platform for perhaps a new development in the International Communist controversy. But it is noteworthy on its own account.

Outer, Mongolla was the most backward country in the entire Communist world when the Russians took over from the "Mad Baron" Ungern and his Buriats and White remnants 40 years ago. It remained backward, save for the Army the Russians created and trained, until the fateful day when the Chinese were allowed to send representatives to Ulan Bator as one of the conditions for their intervention in Koroa in 1950 after the defeat and collapse of the North Korean Army.

At the same time the Chinese Communists extorted the Russians permission to be officially represented also in Pyongyang. Not only Chinese Influence, but even the Chinese "presence" in the persons of the ublaultous morchant, had been eliminated for many years. NDEED, even the trade in furs, Laking and other raw products which used to move south to Tientain for export, in spite of the total ejection of Chinese, was interdicted the late twenties, and Mongoila became a mere political and economic province of the Soviet Union.

The difference in the past few years has been extraordinary. The Chinese have competed deliberately and strongly for a place in the desert sun in Mongolia, it is they who have built a new city in Ulan Bator to replace the old Mongol yurts, who have created numerous new industries, and who have even developed huge agricultural experimental area. The Russians never bothered larceny and conspiracy. of the Mongolst and It is by hearing. no means cortain that the Mongola especially wanted it anyway. But now that the dish of modern industry, highway and town planning has been placed before their eyes, they have taken a liking to it. The Party head Tsedenbal himself stressed the important changes which have occurred since the 13th Congress in March 1958. achievements" attained, he said, development of economy and culture, the moral and political unity of the people—strained on several notable occasions the Japanese first created Manchoukuo -- had "imcomparably strengthened." But he went out of his way to claim all those things for his own Party. though he did say that they were "inseparable from the tremendous fraternal assistance of the great Soviet Union and other Socialist countries."

China has in fact done more in this respect than anybody clee, but not for the beautiful eves of the Mongols themselves. She has not, and she retinguish her conviction that Mongolia is deatined to become, much than Tibet, a vast reservoir into which the surplus and industrious population of China Proper is to be poured in due course.

MINE'one condition that Dr Sun Yat-son stipulated in his 'agreement on mutual' cooperation with the Soviet envoy Joffo in the early days of the Soviet approaches to China was that Moscow must great plan for national con- Residents protested but occupied by all the surplus in any police district, troops who were to become, like the army in Binklang, the first mass colonisers of this

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

College graduates increase the labour force

New York, July 9. The ups and downs of the unemployment situation in the United States this week raised doubts whether U.S. economic expansion—both from the last recession and as a long-term proposition is keeping pace with the growing labour force.

Employment rose to a new high by mid-June— a total of 68,706,000 and a hefty increase of nearly two million from the mid-May figure. But as colleges emptied their classrooms, more than 800,000 were added to the unemployment rolls for a total of 4,580,000.

They warned that with the present population growth and job pattern a situation could develop over the next five to ten years in which shortage of skilled workers for new types of production would hamper expansion on one hand, while on the other there would be growing caste of unemployables, eating into government revenue:

While there was no doubt that economy was making a powerful recovery from the recession, two other indicators also contributed to the debate on whether it was vigorous enough.

Prince Rainler was in a party mood the other day when he arrived in Majorca to launch a new hotel, the Son Dida, in which he is a leading shareholder. The prince, with Princess Grace, sailed into the Mediterranean holiday island with Aristotle Onassis. On board too was opera star Maria Callas-The prince, usually one of the more reserved of the Riviera set, must this time have felt his venture into the hotel business was a good excuse for a celebration. As the party got going he jumped up to the dance band's platform, took over the drums, and beat out a wild rhythm, perspiration running down his brew. The dancers - including Princess Grace clapped enthusiastically at the end.

Inspired by his success, party-giver Elsa Maxwell took over from the pianist, and she and the prince played with the oreliestra for the next 20 minutes. Picture shows Prince Rainier with Maria Callas .- London Express Service,

Headingley—a ground of history

Headingley, where the third Test has just ended, is a ground of history—and the most brilliant pages of that history were written by the fantastic Australian batting machine, Sir Donald Bradman. In his first Test there in 1930, Bradman hit 334 in one of the most astonishing innings ever played. In 1934, he scored 304. In 1938, he hit a modest 102 and 16. Ard in 1948, when he bade his farewell to the scene, he made 33 and 173 not out.

That gave him a Test aggre-ate on this ground of 962 at an average of 192.40. What a characterion fact. Headingley has been a much happier hunting ground for Australia than for England.

Not one win

When I captained England there against Bradman's team of 1948, I was frequently reminded that, although Australia had been playing at Heading-ley since 1899, England had not yet won a Test there and it was time somebody did something about it.

I can now confess that on the fifth morning of that match I

Champions slip

Many people have been asking me this week what has come over Yorkshire. Why have they been feltering, suddenly, in the Championship race?

The answer to that is simple. The balamen just can't click into any scoring consistency and the bowlers can't keep clear of injury. Cowan is out with appendicitis, Platt was off for several games, Don Wilson has a bone broken.

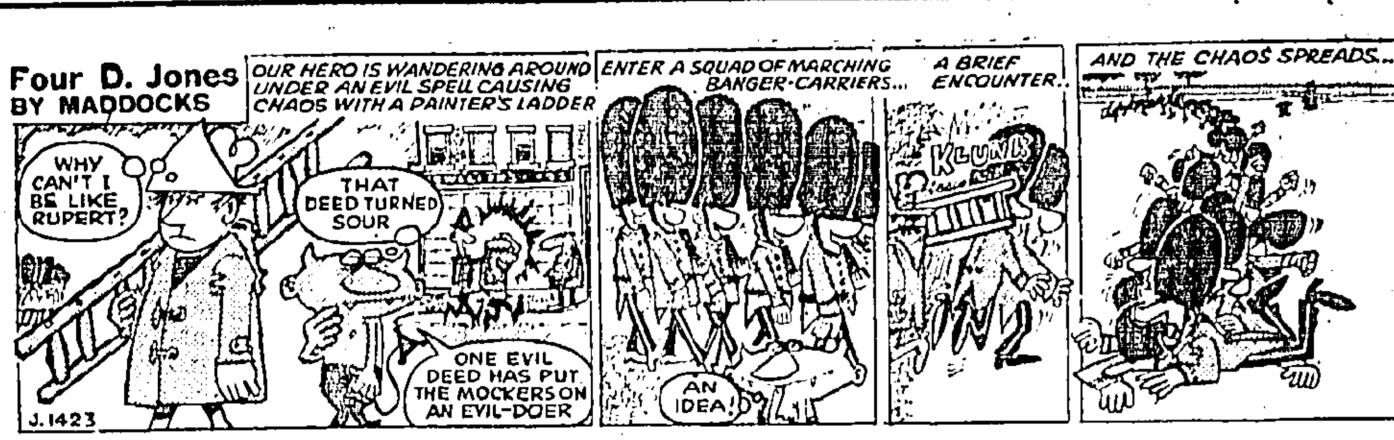

It is true that stand-in men like left-hander Gillhouley have Bradman's 309 (out of his done splendidly.
